Restorative Practice: Time to Connect Restorative Approaches Conference 2017

Underlying restorative justice is the vision of interconnectedness. Whether we realise it or not, we are all connected to each other and to the larger world through a web of relationships
Howard Zehr

In our increasingly disconnected world, this one day conference will focus on the ways restorative practice allows individuals to overcome conflict and harm and reconnect with each other. It will also be an opportunity to connect with practitioners from your and other practice areas, helping to forge new partnerships that improve outcomes for families and citizens alike. Featuring leading academics in the field and published authors running workshops, the conference will enable participants to re-focus and re-connect with restorative practice and its benefits.

Who should attend?

- Restorative practitioners from education, community safety, social care and criminal justice teams. We encourage staff from children and adult contexts to attend
- Staff who are trained in Restorative Approaches (RA) as well as those who are interested in finding out more about how RA can be used

Guest Speakers

Tim Chapman, Ulster University: reflecting on his research into the use of restorative practice in Europe, Tim will discuss a holistic model for delivering restorative practice in different contexts.

Dr. Nadia Wager, University of Huddersfield: will draw on her research to outline how restorative practice can be used positively in serious and complex cases

Workshop Topics:

- 1. Positive Peace in schools
led by Terence Bevington
- 2. Inviting Empathy: Using the principles to encourage and manage empathy in the restorative process
